Headline:
Becoming dry and chilly tonight, rain by Thursday afternoon.

This Evening and Tonight:
Any showers will die away during the evening, with some long clear spells for a time overnight. Becoming chilly by morning with rural parts seeing a touch of ground frost and a few mist or fog patches towards dawn. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Thursday:
After a bright start in the east, thickening cloud will bring some patchy rain across the region from mid-morning. Increasingly windy but brightening up later with a few showers. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Friday windy with coastal gales, and showers or longer spells of rain. Saturday brighter with occasional showers and winds easing. Sunday starting chilly, then further wind and rain spreading east.
